CURRENT SEASON: Marrul is still a hot season, but it signifies seasonal change with less wind and lower humidity. After the wet season there are plenty of bush foods and Marrul begins when the gardgu (long fruited bloodwood) buds flower. Marrul is often known as the dragonfly season with puddles and pools of water providing a rich habitat for tadpoles and frogs. There are birds everywhere and lizards and sand goannas are fat. There are big tides in this season and king tides happen with the equinox. The season ends 6 – 8 weeks later when the south easterly winds start to blow.
